Way to the Voters' Hearts
May Be Through Legislation

The second session of the 80th Congress has encompassed five of the most crucial months in our country's history. It has made some crucial decisions, too, such as the passage of the ERP bill, the passage of the Social Security Act, and the passage of the National Labor Relations Act.

Now Congress is scheduled to adjourn shortly, in time for the national political conventions. As usual, when adjournment time approaches, there is a big backlog of legislation which is vital to the country and which is vital to the world history in the not distant future.

Action on some of these bills has been delayed because there are so many hours in a day for Congressmen to work. But the delay is not a reflection of a lack of interest or a lack of concern for the people. It is a reflection of the fact that the Congressmen are so busy with the world history in the not distant future.

There is the draft bill. Its fate will determine whether the rebuilding of our defense is to be a program of positive action, or simply a stepping-up of production in our airplane factories.

On this must be shaped the recovery of European trade. It is the recovery of European trade which is the key to the recovery of our economy.

There is also the Taft-Hartley-Vagner housing bill. This promising answer to our current housing problem has been kicked around for some four years now.

And there are such things as the bill to admit displaced persons, to revise the National Labor Relations Act, to control communism, and so on.

The draft bill delay is chiefly the responsibility of the House Rules Committee. Considering the urgency of the measure, the delay is inexcusable. The extension of the re-approval of the bill is being talked and temporized with by a group which seems to think that high tariffs will fit in nicely with the world dollar shortage which is holding European recovery to a frustratingly slow pace.

The housing bill finds many members shying away, even though it is a bi-partisan sponsorship gives the cause for political jitters.

Further stalling on these and other matters can do the country tremendous harm. It does not seem likely that the Congress will get through before June 19, and this schedule also calls for the enactment of 10 large appropriations bills before the fiscal year ends.

It seems necessary, then, that Congress should act rather than delay, and come back to work when the conventions are over, such a decision would be popular with the law on Capitol Hill. The House and a third of the Senate are scheduled to meet on June 19, and this is a presidential year. Quite naturally the members would like the whole summer for campaigning.

But we can't see how any congressional candidate in office could build himself more prestige with his constituents than by sticking to his job until it is finished.

Social Cruelties Cause Some Sex Perversions

New York, June 5 —(AP)—Social cruelties actually cause some sexual perversions they are designed to halt, Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey says. However, the Indiana University professor told the American Psychopathological Association yesterday, the code of modern society is a stronger hand in restraining such perversions than do laws.

Dr. Kinsey, author of the best seller "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male," presented statistics of homosexuals which he said showed that social customs are the main reason why many people refrain from the practice of homosexuality.

"People do practice it, he said, where there are no restraining social penalties, and among certain segments of the population" the practice runs to 50 or 60 per cent of the people.

All of a person's experiences in life probably are involved in causing perversions, Dr. Kinsey asserted, adding that he believes physical factors are to some extent factors, but they might be a cause, he declared, but not a strong one.

Washburn Raps Force Bills in Address

Kingston, Pa., June 5 —(AP)—Force bills that would increase the police power of the federal government should be opposed by both North and South, regardless of historic differences, because such measures tend to destroy the unique quality of the American republic and turn it into the minority-stricken pattern of government found among European democracies, an Arkansas editor told a Pennsylvania audience here today.

The editor, Alex. H. Washburn of the Hope (Ark.) Star, addressed the Cum Laude Society at Commencement, Methodist preparatory school, Honorary membership was conferred by the society on the editor and Allan P. Kirby, financier who backed Robert Young in his railroad venture.

Mr. Washburn attacked "force bills not as a partisan spokesman for the South but as a reminder that Americans are guilty in our times of thinking that law will make better men than the homes and schools and churches of the nation have been able to do."

"Our nation was founded on the gospel that there is no substitute for a good man, and government should keep its hands off him," he said.

He said that force bills which tend to break down the third unit of U. S. government—the constitution and its interpreting courts—are "an especially real danger for Americans because our republic is superficially in certain popular government in certain other countries and therefore the significance of basic change in our constitutional form might escape attention until disaster was upon us."

"If the prestige and influential power of the United States Supreme Court as interpreter of the constitution and checkmate on popular government is ever destroyed by its own people then . . . ours will no longer be the American form of government—but it will be the form of government that they have in France and Italy, where cabinets change many times in a year, where the people are at the mercy of the political parties, and where the people are hungry and all are afraid."

Mr. Washburn attacked the Mundt-Nixon bill in congress to outlaw the Communist party, asserting, "It is proposed in free America to restrict the political labels under which individual citizens can be prosecuted for what they think rather than what they do. It is proposed to do this . . . notwithstanding the fact that the United States has always had laws to punish treason, and the further ominous fact that laws to punish 'dangerous thoughts' are associated with dictatorships rather than democracies."

Mr. Washburn also opposed President Truman's so-called Civil Rights Program, saying: "I am a Southerner who has lived in the South for 25 years; you must believe me when I say that the goals of such force bills are more or less the same goals sought by Southerners themselves—but voluntarily, not by compulsion."

"After all, we already have laws to punish murder for the crime of lynching; the courts are taking care of the negro vote question; and segregation is a social rather than a legal matter, and is as apt to occur in the North as it is in the South."

Candidates to Disclose Plans

Little Rock, June 5 —(AP)—This week-end probably will bring a few more tactical moves by candidates for the Democratic nomination as governor. They will be the final preliminary maneuvers before the heavy campaign artillery is unlimbered next week.

Jack Holt likely will disclose his campaign opening plans today. Horace Thompson, with a strategy committee meeting scheduled to announce after that session.

Sidney McMath already has announced that he will open at Pine Bluff next Saturday night and his followers are keeping busy whooping up a large bunch of followers or the rally.

A motor caravan from various parts of the state is planned and a special train will take 200 or 400 East Arkansas supporters to the prosecutor's Pine Bluff opening.

This week-end also may bring formal announcement of two more campaign managers. Neither McMath or Holt have named theirs yet.

Henry Woods of Texarkana president of the Arkansas Young Democratic club, is slated to be McMath's front man. He has been working in McMath's headquarters here and yesterday submitted his resignation as YDC president, effective June 16.

James "Uncle Mac" MacKrell, Bob Ed Loftin, James Merritt, Charles Fleming, John G. Lunsford, Jr. and W. T. Jennings are thought to be speaking tours of the state during the week, with all but Lunsford, breaking the schedule to make five-minute talks at the Arkansas Young Democratic clubs dinner here Wednesday night.

The name "Electra" is given to three Greek legendary figures: the wife of Oceanus; one of the Pioneers; and to the daughter of Agramemnon. The word means "bright one."

Vandenberg Holds Key to Aid Cut

Washington, June 5 —(AP)—Administration hopes of restoring a $1,000,000,000 House cut in American's global aid program apparently rested today on Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.).

The Republican foreign policy leader who steered the Marshall Plan to congressional approval in April was reported fighting mad over the House refusal to vote full for the Europe-Asia aid program.

By voice vote the House last night approved a $5,980,710,228 total to be spread out over 15 months. The administration had set $6,538,710,228 as the minimum for a 12-month period.

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.), ranking minority member on Vandenberg's Foreign Relations Committee, predicted flatly that the House action would be reversed by the Senate.

House passage came after a bi-partisan group led by Reps. Dikens (R-Ill.) and Rayburn (D-Texas) lost a spirited fight to put the trimmed fund on a 12-month basis and to lessen the cash reduction.

This move was defeated 149 to 113. They argued that for Congress to run out on a previous commitment would shake the faith of European democracies in the United States and strengthen Russia's campaign to communize western Europe.

But Chairman Taber (R-N.Y.) whose Appropriation Committee drafted the slash, maintained that the total approval would be sufficient if properly handled. He and other Republicans said American taxpayers already are overburdened.

As approved by the House, the bill carries these amounts: Economic aid to Europe and Asia—$4,000,000,000 instead of the $4,245,000,000 asked. This sum also includes $200,000,000 for aid to Trieste which had been requested in a separate item.

Aid to Greece and Turkey $200,000,000 instead of $275,000,000 requested for military assistance.

Aid to China—$400,000,000 instead of $463,000,000 asked.

Government and relief in occupied areas—$1,250,000,000 instead of $1,400,000,000.

International refugee organization—$70,710,228 as asked.

Protections children's emergency fund—$80,000,000 as asked.

Girl, Aged 5, Safe After Night in the Woods

Rogers, June 5 —(UP)—The five-year-old daughter of a Wichita, Kan., couple was back safe with her parents today after spending 15 hours alone in the woods of northwestern Arkansas.

Glenda Fropfen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Deiters, wandered away from the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Sweet 10 miles northwest of here at 61 m. Thursday.

Neighbors searched without success for several hours and then sent out an appeal for assistance. More than 250 men formed a search party and spread out over a mile-wide area. They found the child about three miles from the Sweet's home.

She told her rescuers she walked until she got tired and then slept soundly on a pile of weeds.

She and a younger brother had tried to follow a younger brother had Sweet on a fishing expedition. The boy returned home, but the girl kept walking.

Himalayan Quake Proves Fatal to 800 Persons

Nanking, June 5 —(AP)—A disastrous earthquake in the remote Himalayan mountain village of Lihwa last month was reported to have killed 800 persons.

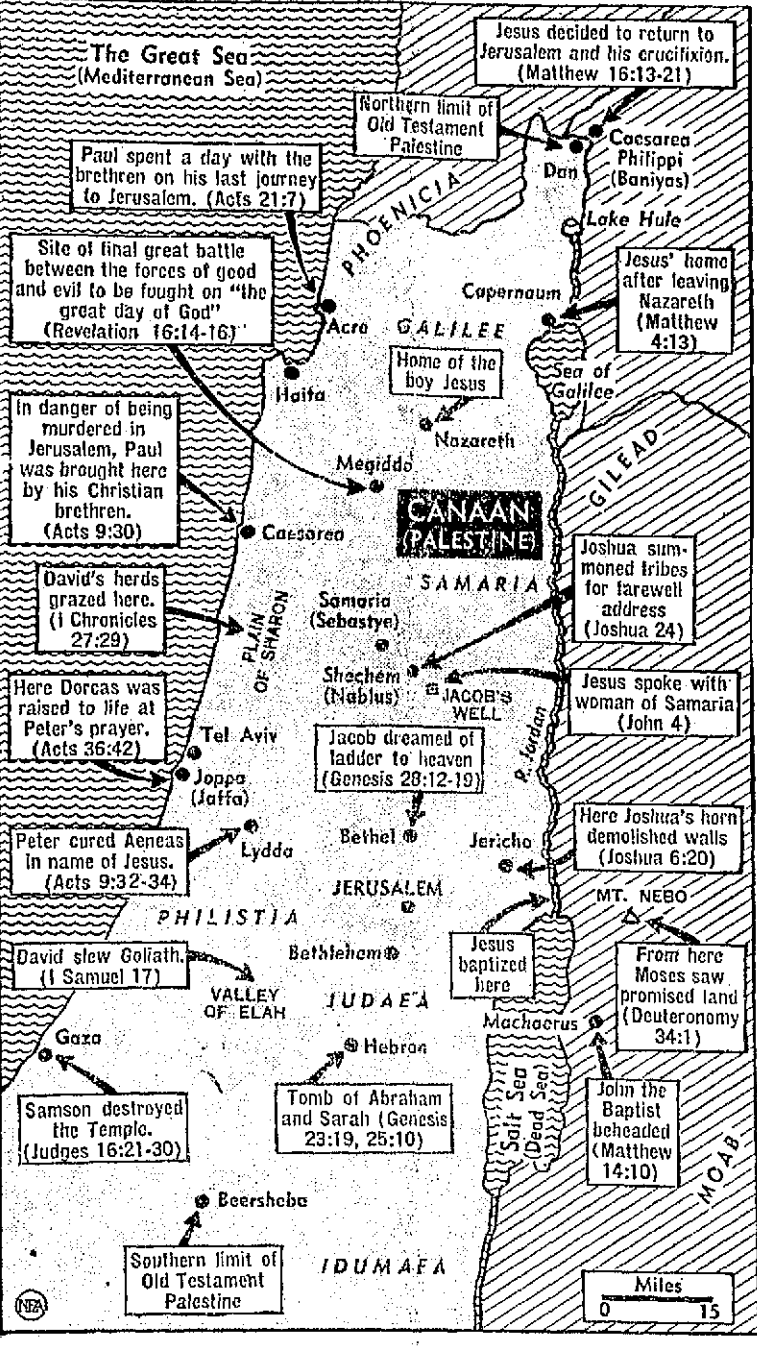

The message, relayed to Nanking by the official Central News Agency, reported that the "quake" almost destroyed the village May 25. Lihwa is in Southern Szechwan province about 375 miles west of Chungking.

"Disturbance was lent to the report by the numerous seismographic record of a violent earthquake on May 25. Instruments in the United States placed the tremor in Asia."

Republicans Have Nation's Best Slogan Writer as Delegate to Convention

By HAL BOYLE
New York, June 4 —(AP)—The greatest cheer leader of our time — "the man who looks like somebody else" — is ready again with slogan, flag and megaphone.

And that means J. Henry Smythe, the world's most persistent slogan writer, will be a delegate—unofficial, as usual—to the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia this month.

"I advocate a new deck to succeed the New Deal's long misadventure," said the Republican party's oldest living unpaid press agent. "I won't really get down to coin-ing slogans in earnest until after the convention of course."

"But here's one for a starter: 'Don't communicate with communism—vote Republican!'"

A recent illness has slowed the pep of this silver-haired, 64-year-old veteran, a figure as familiar at Republican conventions as the Republican party itself.

Smythe, he pronounces it with a distinct "y"—is one of the characters of our era, one with a strong aversion to seeing his name out of print. He is a gentle, enthusiastic man gripped by a series of lifelong cases of hero worship.

His chief passions have been slogans, Benjamin Franklin, the American flag, and the Republican party. Teddy Roosevelt, and looking like somebody else. They have kept him so busy he has never smoked, tasted liquor or married.

By grabbing a flag and a megaphone after President Theodore Roosevelt had been nominated at Chicago in 1904 and following to the surprised delegates:

"Hooray for the president! Hooray for the president! Hooray for the president!"

He has been yelling "hurrah" hard ever since. He has acquired and retained since then in such titles as "The Boy Orator," "The No. 1 Flag-Waver," "Logan's Republican," "The Grand Old Party's Megaphone Man," and "The Republican with a Democratic Face."

The last came from his startling profile resemblance to the late President D. Roosevelt. He is pleased with the resemblance, but voted four times against his illustrious double. Looking like other people rather runs in the Smythe family.

Father looked like George Washington, he said gravely, "and once he was mistaken for President McKinley."

Smythe, formerly a publisher of children's books, lists as his avocation "the promotion of patriotism." But in recent years he has earned a modest living turning out slogans and trade mark names which he calls "the battle cries of business."

He can scribble out as many as 150 in a night and his total output is "in the tens of thousands." As a Red Cross man overseas in the first world war he coined more than a thousand for the Liberty Loan drives, including "Load It to End It" and "Do Your Bit to Keep It Lit"—meaning the torch of liberty.

Among another 1,000 slogan comtributions in the second world war were "Swallow the Swastika," "Ax the Axis," and "Let's go to Tokyo."

Still carrying his old 1904 megaphone, Smythe hopes to get to the Republican convention to include a pledge of allegiance to the flag in its opening ceremony.

"I want them to lay a wreath on Benjamin Franklin's grave, too," he said, "and make Franklin a campaign going to make Franklin the patron saint of peace for the United Nations."

Smythe is a little annoyed at what he regards as the failure by the Republican party to make full use of slogans in its campaign.

For 1912 he coined "Keep Cool—keep the faith!" in 1928 he opposed Al Smith single-handedly with "No containmentation of the nation!" in 1932 he failed to sweep the nation for Hoover.

He kept up out of words: "I am a candidate or delegate myself, Smythe's work is completely a free contribution to his party's welfare."

"I have spent $25,000 of my own money and time working for the Republican party and promoting memorials for Benjamin Franklin," he said.

He smiled a little wistfully and said: "I haven't been well lately. I've lost a lot of weight."

Then he brightened and added with his old cheerful vigor: "You know what people tell me since I lost so much weight? They say I look just like Woodrow Wilson."

Jews Seal Off Egyptian Thrust Into Holy Land

By MAX BOYD

Cairo, June 5 —(AP)—Israeli forces have recaptured Yibna, peak of the Egyptian thrusts into Jewish territory, and have cut off a "considerable" force of Egyptians who drove up the coast on the road to Tel Aviv, the Jewish high command reported today.

Israeli headquarters said yesterday's Egyptian naval sortie into Jewish waters off Tel Aviv may have been an attempt at a "little Dunkerque" to remove the coastal spearhead. The Jews reported last night their planes and coastal guns routed four Egyptian vessels in the first naval skirmish of the Palestine war.

There were conflicting reports on the battle for Yibna, top of the Arab triangle in Northern Palestine. An Iraqi magazine in Baghdad last night said 5,000 Jews were routed there with a loss of 300 killed and 1,000 wounded, but Jewish headquarters in Tel Aviv said Israeli forces continued to "hold all positions captured in this sector."

The Jews reported Arabs rushing reinforcements to meet the threat to the Nabulus-Jenin-Tulkum triangle, but said Arab counterattacks were repulsed.

Yibna, on the coastal highway to Tel Aviv, is five miles inside territory claimed by the state of Israel and 15 miles south of the Tel Aviv-Jaffa area. It is nine miles north of Isdud, where the Jews said the main force of the Egyptian spearhead now is encircled. Nearby is Ramle, where the Egyptians might have linked up with Arab legion and Iraqi units.

The Jewish communiqué said the Egyptians attempted to break out of a trap and suffered losses in armor.

The Cairo newspaper Akhbar El Yom reported the Egyptian army, navy and air force began an offensive at dawn today, but gave no details. There was no word of this from Tel Aviv.

The United Nations mediator seeking to set a date for a four-week truce in the Holy Land conferred for 90 minutes with Premier Nokrady Pasha of Egypt today and planned to leave for Beirut, Lebanon, Haifa and Amman.

Trans-Jordan. He denied a report from Amman that he had fixed Monday for the beginning of the truce.

Dr. Ralph Bunche of the United Nations secretariat said here Swedish Count Folke Bernadotte, U. N. mediator, has not yet fixed time for starting the projected Palestine truce, he said Bernadotte will fly to Haifa and Lebanon today returning to Cairo tomorrow.

Bernadotte cabled from Cairo to the U. N. Security Council at Lake Success, N. Y., last night that the problem of Jewish immigration was the only question delaying a cease fire.

Truman Moves to Omaha in Campaign

By ERNEST B. VACCARO
Omaha, June 5 —(AP)—President Truman arrived in Omaha today in the midst of a cross-country speaking campaign keyed to his championship of seven "goals of abundance."

He moved into Nebraska with his open appeal for November elections after four platform talks yesterday and a major speech in packed Chicago Stadium last night.

Taken together, the speeches do no doubt the president's 8,500 mile, 18 state speaking tour is that of an outgoing candidate.

His schedule here will include a second major, prepared address at 9 p.m. (CST) before the annual reunion of the 35th Division with which he served in World War one.

The "seven goals of abundance" outline last night in this Chicago speech before approximately 22,000 persons attending the Swedish Pioneer Centennial Association.

The goals were: providing adequate housing, health, expanded social security, "full rights of citizenship," universal free schooling, good jobs at fair wages and "a brake on inflation."

Mr. Truman is to join a parade of war veterans and attend a private noon luncheon at the Fontenelle Hotel. This afternoon he is to visit Boys Town. Later he will dedicate a war memorial park and then attend a reception.

He will speak tonight primarily on his farm policy goals, although he likely will touch on his hopes for a draft and universal training.

The president last night made frequent attacks on the Republican-controlled Congress, charging the Chicago crowd that Congress could crush communism by better Democracy.

"You can not stop the spread of communism by passing a law against it," he said.

The president was interrupted 18 times by applause in his stadium speech.

He drew his bow on Congress earlier in a railroad side address at Gary, Ind., when he accused it of serving the "men who have all of the money" instead of the "common people."

He blamed Congress' failure to follow his recommendations on price control for high living costs.

The president made an outright bid for November votes in his Gary, Ind., speech. Saying the American economy must be "sound and solid" to support world peace, he declared:

"If you support me, we will probably get it."

Prospects for Industrial Peace Brighter

Washington, June 5 —(UP)—Federal Mediation Director Cyrus S. Ching said today prospects have brightened for a summer of industrial peace.

He said he was encouraged by John L. Lewis' agreement to resume soft coal wage talks Monday, by the new conferences also slated for Monday in the threatened atomic strike at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and by settlement of the long lines telephone dispute.

"There are more hopeful signs for industrial peace now than for some time," Ching told the United Press. "I think the way things look we ought to go into the summer months with comparatively widespread industrial peace."

Ching said a fact-finding board is working in the maritime dispute to head off a walkout threatened for June 15. The three board members investigating the East and Gulf coasts dispute were to hold a second session today.

The two Pacific coast board members are to begin their investigation late today or tomorrow. The board must report by next Friday.

Ching said the labor-management situation took a turn for the better with General Motors' recent wage agreement with United Auto Workers (CIO). He said the resumption of coal wage talks is a big boost for the chances of summer peace on the labor front.

While conceding that there still are some unsettled negotiations, Ching said he is "hopeful" that strike-less settlements of all pending controversies.

The decision to resume soft coal wage talks came yesterday. Federal Judge Alan Goldsborough issued an injunction requiring John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers to bargain on a new contract with the Southern Coal Producers Association.

Lewis, who previously had refused to negotiate with the association, took no chances on getting socked with another stiff fine for contempt of court. He agreed to obey the order immediately, and suggested that negotiations start today, tomorrow or Monday.

Lewis Ready to Negotiate New Contract

Washington, June 5 —(P)—Prompted by a sharp prod from Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, John L. Lewis was ready today to negotiate with coal operators on Monday.

The order to negotiate does not necessarily mean an early agreement will be reached. Along with the expected union demand for wage increases, there is the stumbling block of pension funds.

Only four weeks remain to sign a contract before the present agreement expires June 30.

While the miners customarily do not work without a contract, the current one allows a vacation from June 26 to July 5. Any strike threat by the 400,000 soft coal mines might therefore be delayed until the last date.

Goldsborough, who twice before has cracked down on Lewis, signed an injunction yesterday directing the UOW and its president to bargain with the Southern Coal Producers Association.

It was Lewis' refusal to do justice with President Joseph E. Moody of the SCPA that led to collapse of talks May 19.

Now, to comply with Goldsborough's order, Lewis and his union have agreed to meet with the operators Monday (9 a.m. CST) but whether the UMW chief would attend in person remained a question.

In a statement read to reporters by Welly K. Hopkins, the miners' general counsel, Lewis said the union would match the operators with "equal representation" at the bargaining conference.

It was seen as a sign he might not attend the talks himself, since instead that U. S. Steel Corporation President Benjamin F. Fairless and other industrial leaders step into negotiations before he cuts them.

Fairless and George M. Humphrey, chairman of the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Company—large commercial coal mining company—met privately with Lewis last summer and quickly agreed on a contract. Lewis reportedly would prefer to do it that way again.

Additional Flood Alarms Sounded in Oregon

By Roger Johnson

Portland, Ore., June 5 —(UP)—Official broadcast a new flood alarm along a 300-mile stretch of the water that obliterated Vanport city last Sunday.

Engineers issued warnings from Umatilla, Ore., to the river mouth at Astoria, that the new swell rolling down at the Highlands would surge at least six inches over the previous crest.

Hundreds of additional army troops were rushed into the Portland area to combat the latest threat to dams which have been weakened by two weeks of constant pressure.

The two bodies recovered from Vanport city were those of a small brother and sister. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Butcher, identified them as Michael, 2, and Sally, 11 months.

They were the only bodies recovered since the Columbia broke through the Vanport dam, which virtually swept the community out of existence.

The army granted the Multnomah county coroner's office permission to set up an emergency morgue at the Vanport site. The base refrigeration plant for use in the event numerous bodies are recovered from the Vanport wreck.

Discovery of the two children's bodies brought back the calamity in the Vanport area. Calamity to three Mike Skaggs, power company employee, was swept away in his truck in a 15-foot torrent of water which in Denver Avenue dike broke Monday and sent a second wave over the town.

At least 35 persons have lost their lives throughout the Pacific Northwest since the floods began three weeks ago when the hot-snow thawed snow lying in the Rocky mountains too fast for the rivers to carry away the run-off.

One of the most critical points was at the Blue Lake dike, north of Portland where troops are now working to plug the breach. The dike broke Monday and sent a second wave over the town.

Elmer Fisher, U. S. Weather Bureau forecaster, said the Columbia River will start rising

Miss Hazel Spillers and Miss Connie Hebert of Hot Springs lighted the candles to the strains of "I Love You Truly."
Following the ceremony, Luther Hollamon, Jr. played a program of nuptial music which included "All For You," "All Of My Life," "Star-dust," "Always," and "Now and Forever," and accompanied Mrs. James McLaughlin who sang "I Love Thee" and "Because." During the processional the Leberding wedding march was played and the recessional Mendelssohn wedding march was used.

During the ceremony, Mr. Hollamon played "None But The Lonely Heart."
The bride, given in marriage by her brother, W. C. Tolleson, Jr. of Maricao, Venezuela was beautiful in a raspberry ice pink gladioli suit with matching shoes, and a white straw bonnet with a crown sprinkled with gold sequins and a shoulder length veil. Marital Reciprocity

The trouble with married life is that there isn't enough reciprocity in it. If it was a far trade in which each party gave the other a square deal and in which they dealt with each other in generosity, there would be no disgruntled husbands and wives crying out that marriage is a failure, and no more unhappy homes.

As it is, marriage is only too often a skin game, in which a man and woman each deliberately set out to get the best for himself or herself and to monopolize all of the pleasures and perquisites of the holy estate. And inevitably the one who wins out is the hardest boiled, who is the most selfish and grasping and who has the least heart and conscience.

Sometimes it is the husband who grabs off all the best for himself and leaves all the work and sacrifice to his wife. We all know men who wear the most expensive clothes, smoke the finest cigars, belong to good clubs and have the reputation of being big spenders, while their wives are shabby and never have a dime that they can call their very own.

We all know men who never think of spending an evening at the movies, yet who raise Cain if their wives step out to the movies with a neighbor woman. We know men who are born philanthropists, but who would consider themselves grievously ill-used if their wives (A.P.L.) loved another man. We know men who feel that home is just a place where they can vent all of their bad temper and general cussedness, yet who think that their wives should always be bright and cheerful. Wife Greedy, Too

Just as often the wife is the greedy one who takes all of the frosting off the matrimonial cake. We see them on all sides. Women who think of nothing but dressing themselves up in the latest fashion, while their husbands look like something the cat dragged in. Women who won't cook their husbands a decent meal, who won't even get up and get them breakfast. Women who are slovenly and dull and who will do nothing to ward making a comfortable home, or being helpful to their husbands, or even being pleasant and agreeable, and yet who expect their husbands to go on supporting them and being faithful to them.

No spectacle is more common than the grating husband and wife who take all and give nothing. No wonder so many women fall out of love with their husbands. No wonder so many men come to loathe their parasitic wives.

And the pity of it is that these greedy husbands and wives in trying to get everything lose all. Selfishness blights love as frost does a flower, and while we may find an altruistic happiness in offering ourselves up as a sacrifice for a beloved one, it is not in human nature not to resent our husband or wife making us the family goat.

Only those homes are happy in which the husband and wife put each other's good before their own in which they find their own happiness in seeking the other's happiness. There should be give-and-take in marriage, but it should be mutual.

THE STORY: Jessica sees David again. She is happy to be with him but feels a sudden surge of fear. David is sure everything will turn out all right. Jessica can't seem to fight off her despair.

Lucy was different. She would come home from work and make a listless effort to eat her supper, help with the dishes as usual, and sit down with a book or her sewing. But her thoughts would drop the sewing in her lap and stare vacantly across the room at nothing in particular.

Her gray-blue eyes mirrored alarm when Jessica asked her one evening, "What's wrong with you, Lucy?"

"Wrong?" She tried to speak briskly, picked up her sewing, a dress she was making for Betty, and began to work with almost feverish activity. "What could be wrong?" she demanded.

Mrs. Blake came in from the kitchen and sat down near them. She said, "She's worn out waiting on Betty. It isn't her place to take so much responsibility. When I had children, I knew that."

Lucy spoke mildly but firmly. "When you had children the situation was entirely different. Mother, you had a husband in the home who could help you."

Mrs. Blake paid no attention to her daughter's insinuation. "I could give you a good girl and so helpful. I really don't know how I could have managed this past year without her," she observed; and although she did not look up, Jessica felt her mother-in-law's hard eyes fastened accusingly upon her.

Finally, Mrs. Blake, receiving no response from Lucy, and no evidence that her baiting would bring a retort from Jessica, got up and returned to the kitchen.

Lucy dropped her sewing as the kitchen door closed behind her mother. "I wish Genevieve would not insist in coming here," she said. "She upsets Mother." She smiled faintly. "You have probably guessed that Genevieve has wanted to marry Tom ever since they went to Sunday school together. Mrs. Miles and Mother had no other idea but that Tom and Genevieve would marry eventually."

"Maybe she still has hopes," remarked Jessica, tossing aside the paper. "I look—why does your mother hate me, Lucy?"

Lucy's work slid from her lap to the floor. She stopped and retrieved it, removed her thimble and stuck her needle into her forehead before she answered. "Mother's bitter," she said slowly. "She's always been like that—hating someone. I think she despised my father. He liked to laugh. She was a snob. I grew up thinking of only one thing—what I must do or not do to go to heaven. Now, I wonder—" She broke off and her eyes shifted away from Jessica's as she went on hastily. "I shouldn't say that. I try to do what is right."

Jessica swung her chair about and caught Lucy's slender fingers. "You're too good, Lu," she said impulsively. "You should have a life of your own, marry, have a husband."

She was crying, Lucy, crying. "You'll be nothing but the kind of a failed skin," she said bitterly. "I'll live here with Mother until I'm pensioned. I'll be like those horrible old maids who become queer!" She covered her face with her hands.

"You'll be nothing but the kind of a failed skin," she said bitterly. "I'll live here with Mother until I'm pensioned. I'll be like those horrible old maids who become queer!" She covered her face with her hands.

Lucy dabbed at her eyes, bit her lips. "I don't know why I went to pieces like that," she said apologetically. "Things haven't gone so smoothly at the office lately. I've been nervous and Hugh has been impatient with me." She looked up startled. "I mean Mr. Linton. And I shouldn't criticize Mr. Linton. He's been so generous to me always. His voice except and again her face worked pitifully. "I'm ashamed of myself," she said angrily. "Please don't tell Mother, will you?"

"Of course not," said Jessica. "But you work too hard. No man should expect his secretary to spend her evenings bent over a typewriter."

Shortly afterward Mrs. Blake returned, flashing a suspicious glance at Lucy. "Would you like to walk over to Genevieve's, Lucy," she asked, "and see if she can help me tomorrow evening with my jelly? I've never seen a girl so capable as Genevieve."

She rambled on, but Jessica rose and said: "Want me to go with you, Lu?"

"Will you?"

When they were outside together talking down the street, Jessica took Lucy's arm. She said, "I want to tell you something. Something which may upset you, but I think you should know."

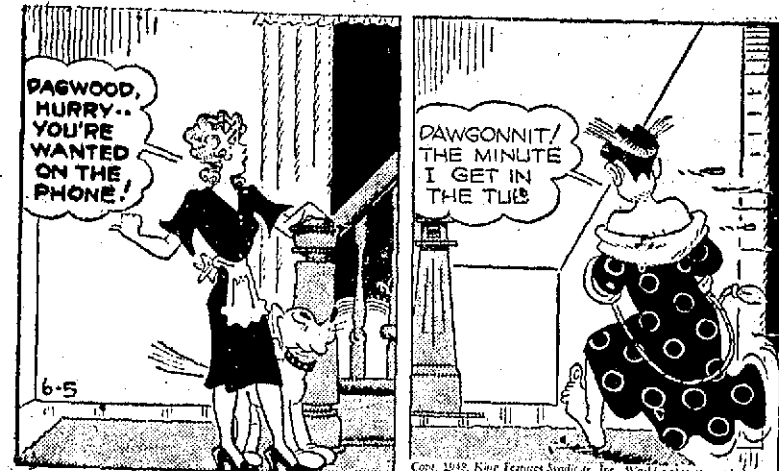

Lucy said, "It's about David Gregory, isn't it?"

"Yes, of course, I seldom see him, for I'm in another office, but he has frequent conferences with Mr. Linton."

Lucy knew a David Jessica had never seen. Jessica thought of how little she knew of David except at their meetings. She felt a stab of uneasiness. Once before she had been tricked by ardor and infatuation. Was she weak and starved for affection and consequently vulnerable when she had met David Gregory?
